ACTS that appeal with good cheer, song and comedy are crammed into the bill playing at the Pantages.

Headlining the happy show are the Imperial Pekinese Troupe, Chinese wonder workers, who have a snappy cycle of sleight of hand tricks cleverly performed, some dances presented in graceful manner by the woman member of the troupe, and a lot of acrobatic flip flops by the juvenile member. They are a clever group and their act goes over with a smash.

Ted MacLean, former Salt Lake man, and his company have a riproaring comedy called "Leave Well Enough Alone," brimful of laughs and clever lines. Joe Roberts—he of the syncopated banjo music—is bringing down Revue," a song and dance trip around the world. Master Paul, violinist, presents "The Golden Bird," which is a real canary of almost human intelligence. Other acts will be Ned Norworth and company in "What's the Matter With 'Em?"; the Dixie Four, singing comedians; Delton, Mareno and Delton, in a series of athletic surprises, and Marjorie Lake, "the girl with the big voice."

the house with his jazzy glad tunes, while Chester Spencer and dimpling Dolly Wilson garner a bagful of laughs in their bubbling little skit "Putting It Over." Weir and Temple show everyone what real singing means, and the Mozarts step off some lively jazz dances on snow shoes. There's an entertaining pictorial weekly and blithe musical program by Eddie Fitzpatrick and his Pantages orchestra to fill out the bill, which plays through Tuesday night.

Opening Wednesday afternoon comes a topnotch show, with a headline attraction in the "Word Wide far away and watched the fire burn.

"At another time he passed a church, and said he thought he must have had fire on the brain, so he set another fire. At that time he had his violin with him, which he left at a house nearby and told the folks he was going up-town for an hour. Instead of going up-town, he slipped back into the church, set fire to some cotton and carpets in the basement and ran away.

"The last fire set by this boy, so far as we are advised, was that of his father's barn. He said he ate supper that evening about 5:45, hurried from the table a few minutes before the
